

MOODY AVIATION

My name is Cass Walden and I am a student at Moody Aviation. We are trained to become missionary aviators in parts of the world that require specialized aircraft into locations that are hard or nearly impossible to reach in other ways.

It is a 5 year program that gives us all of the skills and knowledge we need to be able to help people around the world get disaster relief, medical supplies, and in many places translated Bibles in the local language.

With your help I could accomplish my goals of becoming a pilot in a location where it is truly needed for survival and help spread the Gospel all around the world

If you have any questions or would like updates on my progress through the school feel free to email me at cassidy.walden@Moody.edu

Financial Goals/Needs

The remainder of my schooling costs around 100,000$. Each semester in the flight training gets more expensive. I am seeking financial assistance for this so that I may continue training and graduate in June 2028. This semester I owe 5,000$. Any help will go a long way to helping me continue in school and getting to the mission field.
